Friends' Summer Garden Party – Forbury Gardens

The three Reading Friends' Groups – the Friends of Reading Abbey (FORA), the Friends of Reading Museums (FoRM) and the Friends of Caversham Court Gardens (FCCG) – combine each year to hold a Summer Party that is free at entry, for the enjoyment of residents, family and friends; and to promote awareness of the three Friends' organisations, and Reading Abbey, Reading Museums, and Caversham Court Gardens, to the wider community of the Borough of Reading.

David Owen Norris has just recorded his fourth series of Chord of the Week for BBC2 television's PromsExtra this summer. His Piano Concerto is released on EM Records this month. He's Professor of Musical Performance at the University of Southampton.

Helen Deeming studied music and medieval history at the University of Cambridge before writing her Ph.D. on English music of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries. In 2004-05 she held the Senior Rouse Ball Research Studentship at Trinity College, Cambridge; she was subsequently Lecturer in Music at the University of Southampton before joining Royal Holloway in 2009.

Vincent Gillespie has been J.R.R. Tolkien Professor of English Literature and Language at Oxford since October 2004. He began teaching at the University of Reading, where he was a lecturer from 1977-1980. His research considers the broad range of post-conquest writing in England, with particular interests in literary theory, religious writing, mystical language, and concepts of poetic identity in medieval and early modern writers. He's also an expert on Harold Pinter.
